BIOSOCIAL CRIMINOLOGY

I. Why Criminology Needs the Biosocial Perspective

Plomin, R., & Daniels, D. (1987). Why are children in the same family so different from one another?. Behavioral and Brain Sciences, 10, 1-16.

II. Evolutionary Psychological Perspectives on Variation in Antisocial Behavior

III. Behavioral Genetics

IV. The Application of Behavioral Genetics to the Field of Criminology

V. Gene-Environment Interplay in the Development of Antisocial Behavior

VI. Molecular Genetics and Candidate Gene x Environment Interaction

VII. Neuroscience and Antisocial Behavior

VIII. Physiology and Antisocial Behavior

