GENERAL COURSE DESCRIPTION:
The field of Humanistic Psychology views the human experience in a most positive way. Humanistic Psychologists are of the belief that self-concept, or how we view ourselves, is of utmost importance, in terms of where the journey of life leads us. Psychologists like Abraham Maslow have suggested that, with a good self-concept, and the willingness to work very hard, you can become whoever you want to become, whether it's a doctor, lawyer, philosopher, etc. This belief, that we, as human beings, have unlimited potential, and that we should take full advantage of all the wondrous things that we can accomplish, in the course of our lives, is what is called the Human Potential Movement. This course will investigate, in depth, the theoretical orientations of humanistic psychology. We will examine life as it is viewed through prominent humanistic psychologists and writers.

TEXTBOOKS:
There are three (3) textbooks for this class:
(1) The Meanings of Life by Roy Baumeister (Required)
(2) Man's Search for Meaning by Viktor Frankl (Required)
(3) A Way Of Being by Carl Rogers (Recommended)

COURSE FORMAT:
Class will consist of lecture and discussion, either in groups or as a class. Students are strongly encouraged to actively participate in class through discussion. Two exams will be given and one writing assignment will be assigned throughout the semester and it must be handed in to me in a timely manner. No late assignments will be accepted.

EXAMS:
There will be two in-class exams. The exams will consist of multiple-choice questions. Exam questions will come from lecture material as well as textbook material, which may or may not have been covered in class. Therefore, it is very important that you read the chapters for each exam. The tentative calendar will indicate which topics will comprise each exam, tentative exam dates, and other important deadlines and reminders. Course grades will be based on the grading scale below. YOU WILL NEED SCANTRONS (GREEN) AND NO. 2 PENCILS FOR EACH EXAM.
HUMANISTIC PSYCHOLOGY PAPER:

This is to be a maximum of two-pages on how instances in your life have shaped your life, from a humanistic perspective. Example questions to ask yourself might include: How has my past made me who I am today? How can the way I view the world dictate my future? Is the goodness in me and in others a constant or an ill-conceived notion? Do the concepts of self-esteem, self-actualization, and congruence play a part in where my life is now and where it is going?

This paper is be typed, doubled-spaced, and PROOFREAD!!! You will lose points for not checking your work and grammatical and spelling errors.

ILLUSTRATION OF MEANING - MAN'S SEARCH FOR MEANING DISCUSSION:

On November 26th, each student is to bring a one-to-two page report on the book Man’s Search For Meaning by Viktor Frankl. The paper must contain the purpose of the book, its main themes, and three critical instances that occurred in the book. We will discuss these in class and each student will explain their reaction to the book. You must read the book!!!
