COURSE DESCRIPTION
When Americans celebrated the nation’s centennial in 1876, they could look back on many changes. No longer simply a handful of states on the east coast, the country now stretched across the entire continent. Some territory was still under the control of Indians—the first inhabitants—but that control was waning. The United States had grown much more populous, and immigrants were arriving from new areas like China and Eastern Europe. Perhaps most dramatic, the nation had endured escalating sectional tension and had survived a civil war that ultimately ended slavery and restored the Union. The centennial seemed to mark the turning of a page, the birth of a different era. As Americans entered this modern age, they found themselves facing many new challenges. We shall explore several of those challenges in depth and consider how modernity shaped the United States as well as what it meant to be American. Rather than cover every event like a survey, this course will look closely at particular themes: environment, religion, labor, warfare, and identity. In general, we will follow a chronological format, but there will be a bit of going back and forth as we examine larger trends. Along the way, we will encounter famous faces. However, we will also look closely at the ways in which ordinary Americans experienced events and made an impact on society. By studying our past, we will understand more clearly how we became who we are today.

LEARNING OUTCOMES
Most people I meet say that they don’t like history. “Too dry,” they say. “Too many dates and facts.” This course will cover a great deal of information, but along the way I hope you will develop a greater interest in learning about the past. Indeed, my personal goal is to change your opinion of the study of history—for the better. You probably have goals of your own in taking this course. Most of you need to fulfill the legislative requirement, some of you may need an elective, and others may simply be curious about the story of our nation. Whatever your reasons for taking the class, I hope that you will view it as something more than a hurdle you have to jump on the way to graduation. This course will help you hone a number of concrete skills, which you will find important as a worker and as a citizen. Over the semester you should:

- Improve your ability to read closely and analytically.
- Improve your written and verbal communication.
- Sharpen your critical thinking.
- Learn how to interpret and analyze primary historical documents.
- Learn how to interpret and analyze secondary sources.
- Learn how to detect arguments as well as how to craft and support your own.
- Work collaboratively.
- Appreciate the importance of perspective.

You will cultivate these important skills through readings, discussions, in-class exercises, outside assignments, and exams. Let’s start with the required books, as they are the foundation for most of the work in this course.

REQUIRED BOOKS AND OTHER READINGS
You would be surprised to learn how much time I spend in selecting books to assign. Contrary to what some of you may think, I do not purposely seek out readings that are overly long and dull. Instead, I pick books that are relatively short and written for a broad audience. I also realize that, for many of you, the purchase of books poses a financial challenge, so most of the titles chosen cost under $20 (buy them used for a cheaper price). While you will undoubtedly find some more enjoyable than others, you will be learning something new and interesting about American history in each one.

REQUIRED BOOK CHECKLIST
- Nine Years Among the Indians, 1870-1879 – Herman Lehmann (ISBN-10: 0826314171; $18.95)
- The Bread Givers – Anzia Yezierska (ISBN-10: 0892552905; $10.00)
In addition to the five books listed above, you will be assigned various primary documents and scholarly articles over the course of the semester. These supplemental readings will be announced at least one class period before they are due. Professors and students often play a cat and mouse game when it comes to assigned readings. While some students read every word the professor assigns, many skim through the pages and some skip the assignment altogether. As much as humanly possible, strive to be the student who reads everything at least once. Even if you don’t enjoy the chapter or book, you need to read the assignment in order to complete coursework and participate in discussions. Quizzes are a common way of encouraging students to read and “getting” those who don’t. Though I find them unpleasant to write, read, and grade, I will give them if there appears to be an epidemic of non-reading. Please note: It is the responsibility of the student to obtain required books and complete all reading assignments on time. Make sure you buy them as soon as possible, as the bookstores will be sending back their stock to make way for the next semester.

ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS You must also purchase some kind of spiral notebook to use as a “Reading Journal” and “Participation Log” (more on this later), and you’ll need to check your University email address (whatever is linked to Blackboard) at least once a day throughout the semester.

READING AND LECTURE SCHEDULE
Below is a list of weekly reading assignments (M stands for Monday and W for Wednesday). Lectures will be short and will generally pertain to the topic covered in the book. In general, readings are due on the day they appear. For example, the first reading assignment is from Nine Years Among the Indians and due the day it appears in the schedule: Wednesday, 1/23.

Group Project: The book Summer for the Gods will not be the subject of one of your essays, but the episode it explores certainly merits deeper scrutiny. You will work with a partner and select a topic from the following website, which looks at the Scopes Trial from multiple angles: http://www.law.umkc.edu/faculty/projects/ftrials/scopes/scopes.htm. More information about this assignment is forthcoming, but it involves a short written component as well as a presentation to the class. Bonus Book Project: In addition to the assigned books, you will select a Bonus Book pertaining to some aspect of warfare in the United States from 1876 to 1945. Each student will select a different book from a list I have compiled. In putting this list together, I kept in mind three criteria: (1) Each book is around 200-300 pages long—very doable. (2) Most cost under $20, and all are available through the library or interlibrary loan. (3) Each of the books is tailored for a broad audience. In other words, these are the kind of books you might pick up to read in your spare time (yes, some of you may actually read history for fun in the future). Some of the books listed cover wide swaths of history, while others focus more narrowly on events and individual experiences. Please note: Because each student will read a different Bonus Book I have not ordered them for campus bookstores. You will need to obtain them online or through the library—if your selected book is not at the library you may order it there through interlibrary loan. More information about the Bonus Book project will appear in a handout.

Reading Journal/Participation Log: To help you read more thoughtfully and analytically, you will keep a Reading Journal. Every time I assign a portion of the text or outside document, I will give you a question to think about as you read. Some are factual while others ask you to engage critically with the text/document. You will need to write an entry as many times as there are reading assignments for a given week—usually three—but you are allowed to take one week off (choose your week off wisely). Though I do not require a particular length, you usually need at least half a page to develop a complete thought. Responses must be “complete” to obtain full credit—in other words, you must fully address the question(s) and demonstrate thoughtful consideration of the piece. Periodically, you will be assigned in-class responses, such as to readings due that day. Therefore, Reading Journals must be brought to class every day. From time to time I shall pick them up to see how you’re doing.
Students must adhere to the SHSU Code of Student Conduct, which can be found at https://www.shsu.edu/students/guide/dean/codeofconduct.html. And within this classroom, students must also demonstrate civility at all times. In other words, do not come in late, leave early, text message, speak quietly, do Sudoku, or anything else that disrupts the class or distracts me. Civility must also be maintained in all communications with me and with other students. Please note: Outside participation opportunities are especially helpful for those who are too shy to speak up in class. At the end of the semester, full credit will be given to those students who make informed comments, ask thoughtful questions, demonstrate preparedness, and actively involve themselves throughout the semester. Full credit also depends on consistent civility—please see “Classroom Rules of Conduct” below. STUDY TIPS Consider finding one or more study partners in class at the beginning of the semester. Study buddies can be a valuable resource in preparing for exams. In addition to drawing on your classmates and seeking help from the instructor, you may wish to take advantage of other resources available to you on campus. The SAM Center (located in AB4 109) can help you master skills necessary for working through the assigned texts. CLASSROOM RULES OF CONDUCT

2.01 Procedures for discipline due to academic dishonesty shall be the same as in disciplinary actions specified in The Texas State University System Rules and Regulations and Sam Houston State University Student Guidelines except that all academic dishonesty actions shall be first considered and reviewed by the faculty member teaching the class. The faculty member may impose failure or reduction of a grade in a test or the course, and/or performing additional academic work not required of other students in the course. If the faculty member believes that additional disciplinary action is necessary, as in the case of flagrant or repeated violations, the case may be referred to the Dean of Student Life or a designated appointee for further action. If the student involved does not accept the decision of the faculty member, the student may appeal to the chair of the appropriate academic department/school, seeking reversal of the faculty member's decision. 2.02 If the student does not accept the decision of the chair of the academic department/school, he/she may appeal to the appropriate academic dean. The chair of the academic department/school may also refer the case directly to the academic dean if the case so warrants. ATTENDANCE POLICY Either you or some kind third-party is paying a lot of money for you to be enrolled in this course. Divide the amount paid for the course by the total number of times we meet, and write that amount down every time you miss class. That was money spent for no return benefit. And the class loses out, too, by not having your contributions that day. Make the course a success and make the most of your investment by coming to every class. Attendance is required and will be taken at the start of class—anyone arriving after attendance has been taken will be counted absent. Of course, there are times when you won’t be able to come because of illness or other matters. If you have to miss class for any reason, please send me an email as soon as possible letting me know of your situation. Please note: Students who miss more than three classes may receive a grade reduction at the end of the term. Students who miss more than six classes will be recommended to drop the course altogether. Section 51.911(b) of the Texas Education Code requires that an institution of higher education excuse a student from attending classes or other required activities, including examinations, for the observance of a religious holy day, including travel for that purpose. A student whose absence is excused under this subsection may not be penalized for that absence and shall be allowed to take an examination or complete an assignment from which the student is excused within a reasonable time after the absence. SHSU policy 861001 provides the procedure to be followed by the student and instructor. A student desiring to absent himself/herself from a scheduled class in order to observe a religious holy day(s) may present to the instructor involved a written statement concerning the religious holy day(s). This request must be made in the first fifteen days of the semester in which the absence(s) will occur. The instructor will complete a form notifying the student of a reasonable time frame in which the missed assignments and/or examinations are to be completed. STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES It is the policy of Sam Houston State University that individuals otherwise qualified shall not be excluded, solely by reason of their disability, from participation in any academic program of the university. Further, they shall not be denied the benefits of these programs nor shall they be subjected to discrimination. Students with disabilities that might affect their academic performance are expected to visit with the Office of Services for Students with Disabilities located in the Counseling Center. They should then make arrangements with the instructor in order that accommodations can be made to assure that participation and achievement opportunities are not impaired. SHSU adheres to all applicable federal, state, and local laws, regulations, and guidelines with respect to providing reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities. If you have a disability that may affect adversely your work in this class, then I encourage you to register with the Counseling Center and to talk with me about how I can best help you. All disclosures of disabilities will be kept strictly confidential. Please note: No accommodation can be made until you register with the Counseling Center and provide me with proper documentation. VISITORS IN THE CLASSROOM Unannounced visitors to class must present a current, official SHSU identification card to be permitted to the classroom. They must not present a disruption to the class by their attendance. If the visitor is not a registered student, it is at the instructor’s discretion whether or not the visitor will be allowed to remain in the classroom. INSTRUCTOR EVALUATIONS At the end of the semester, students will be asked to complete an evaluation of the course, but I welcome feedback about readings, assignments, and my instruction throughout the semester. Let’s work together to make this a successful and rewarding learning experience. CHANGES TO THIS SYLLABUS This syllabus is your contract for the course. I will not change the nature of the course, the number of assignments, or the grading system. However, I reserve the right to update the course schedule and reading assignments throughout the term.
