Course Description: Philosophy 263 is a study of major moral issues in contemporary society. It includes topics such as abortion, euthanasia, capital punishment, and other issues that confront today's society.

Course Goals: In this course, students will:

- Become familiar with several major moral theories, such as utilitarianism, deontology, and natural rights,
- Investigate and discuss current thinking on contemporary moral issues, and
- Learn to apply critical and reflective reasoning to ethical issues.

Required Text: Judith Boss, Analyzing Moral Issues, Fourth Edition (Boston: McGraw-Hill, 2008). It is the student's responsibility to obtain the textbook and bring it to class.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

I. Tests, and Final Exam

There will be three tests. Each of the three tests will be worth 15 percent of your final grade. In addition there will be a final exam, which will be cumulative and will be worth 20 percent of your final grade. The tests and final exams will consist of a multiple-choice section, plus a short essay section. The questions will come from material in the textbook and material covered in class. You should bring a scantron to each of the tests and the final exam.

Any student who is absent on test dates should be prepared to take a make-up of the missed test on the first day of returning to class. Students will not be assessed a penalty for a make-up test if the student has an acceptable written and dated excuse (doctors note or death in the immediate family). All other make-up tests will be assessed at least a 10 point penalty. The final exam cannot be made-up unless there are dire circumstances.

II. Participation

Participation will account for 15 percent of your final grade. This will include your participation in class, homework, and a short presentation. More details will be provided in class and documented on Blackboard.

III. Paper

Each student will be required to write a philosophic paper, worth 20 percent of your final grade. The paper should be typewritten, double-spaced, and approximately 5 to 7 pages. The paper is due April 3. There is a 10-point penalty if the paper is late. There is a 20-point penalty if the paper is over a week late. No papers will be accepted after May 1.

The paper is on a contemporary moral issue. More information on the exact format will be provided in class and documented on Blackboard.

IV. Extra Credit

Occasionally there will be an opportunity to earn extra credit. These opportunities will be announced in class and documented on Blackboard. Up to a possible 2 points added to your final grade can be earned. No extra credit will be awarded after May 1.

V. Attendance

Students are expected to attend classes regularly and class participation is strongly encouraged. In accordance with University regulations, a record of each student's attendance will be kept. If you do not attend class, you must drop the course before the deadline; otherwise, you will receive an F.

VI. Instructor Evaluations: You are encouraged to provide me with feedback (what you like, what you don't like) at any time during the semester. You will be asked to complete a course/instructor evaluation form toward the end of the semester. I use these evaluations to make changes in the future.
