

SHSU Faculty and Students Present at the 37th Annual Texas Society of Allied Health Professions Conference

Faculty and students from the College of Health Sciences (COHS) at Sam Houston State University recently presented at the 37th Annual Texas Society of Allied Health Professions (TSAHP) Conference in Houston, TX, on September 25 -26. TSAHP is one of the primary organizations in the state of Texas that serves the educators in the allied health professions.

The title of this year's conference was: "Translational Processes in Allied Health: From Education to Practice". Presentations made by COHS faculty and students include:

The Effect of Senior Meal Assistance Programs on Malnutrition Risk in Free Living Elders in Texas

L. Mook; M. Akin; M. Chang; V. Browning-Keen

How Do I Teach THAT Online? Techniques for Blending Online and Face-to-face Learning to Maximize Student Development

J. Didier; A. Glave

Oral Health Protocols and Observations of Food Modification and Avoidance Behaviors in Dementia Patients as Described by Nursing Personnel

A. Gallager; K. Smith; V. Browning-Keen

Unique Role of Nutrition and Interior Design Professionals in Achieving Meal Time Satisfaction in Dementia Residents

V. Browning-Keen; K. Kabay; L. Boyd; A. Beck; L. Burlison