Chicago Style Page Formatting

The entire research paper should use one-inch margins, and the body of the paper should be double-spaced. Block quotes, however, should be indented .5in from the left margin and double-spaced. A title page should be included (an example is on the back of this handout), and page numbering should begin on the page immediately after the title page (start numbering at 2). Pages including only maps, graphs, or illustrations and the bibliography should be consecutively numbered as they appear within the entire research paper.

all men, are conceived in sin , and born the children of wrath, indisposed to all saving good, propense to evil, dead in sins and the slaves of sin; and without the grace of the regenerating Holy Spirit, they neither are willing nor able to return to God. [...] There is indeed remaining in man, since the fall, some light of nature, by the help of which he retains certain notions concerning God and natural things [...]; but so far from being able by this light of nature to attain the saving knowledge of God, or to turn himself to him.<sup>1</sup>

This position actually appears the more liberal of the two suggesting that some remnant of goodness remains in mankind.

To the remaining articles the Synod of Dort proclaimed a harsh and sometimes reactionary stance. Our study turns once more to the acronym T.U.L.I.P. Dort confirms, as we have read, the total depravity of man. This is clearly an element of Reformed thought that is not reactionary toward Armenian principles. To the contrary it seems to confirm the depravity ...
