Notes on MLA

- When no author is provided, leave that part blank and begin with the title.
- When no page numbers are provided, insert N.pag. except for when no page number is needed in the citation.
- If any other data is missing and cannot be found, skip over that information and move on to the next necessary item.
- Always use the most recent copyright year listed as the year of publication unless otherwise instructed.
- If you are not able to find the website on your own (using only the information you provided) without the URL, it is probably not a credible source.
- It is never recommended that you use a source that does not list an author, but if you do, make sure you can verify any facts you use elsewhere.
