African American Women and the College
Presidency: Leadership Pedagogy Through A
Social Justice Lens

African American women college presidential leadership is more than bureaucratic or technical leadership styles. Their leadership is pedagogical, meaning it is rooted in teaching and learning. The purpose of this research is to amplify the role that African American women educators have played historically and contemporaneously as social activists and pedagogues on college campuses and how these historical experiences influence the social justice leadership approaches of current African American women college presidents.
