Voter Psychology and Women Congressional Candidates

This study investigates why there are substantially more Democratic women than Republican women in Congress. This is evaluated through a voter psychological framework and a survey experiment is employed. Moreover, political polarization is evaluated in this context to determine if voters with higher hostile views toward the opposing political party are more affected by the liberal connotation of women. Additionally, I seek to find if this affects voters’ perceptions and voting decisions regarding women Congressional candidates.

Event Information
Date: June 29, 2023
Time: 1 p.m. CT
Location: Zoom

Committee Members
Dr. Austin Bussing
Dr. Stacy Ulbig
Dr. Crystal Whetstone
Dr Dennis Weng